Who Speaks: Understanding Point of View with Susan Midalia - Code UPVSM1

“Who speaks” in a story – the point of view from which it is narrated – is a crucial element in the creation of a memorable short story. A story can sometimes be improved by changing or modifying its point of view; by using dual or multiple points of view; by changing the voice of the narrator. Discover the wonderful affects you can achieve by playing around with point of view.

Susan Midalia

Susan Midalia is the author of three collections of short stories, all shortlisted for major literary awards: A History of the Beanbag (2007), An Unknown Sky (2012) and Feet to the Stars (2015). Her first novel, The Art of Persuasion, was published in 2018 and has been extensively and favourably reviewed in national newspapers and journals. Susan has a PhD in contemporary Australian women’s fiction, and has been a workshop facilitator over many years. She is the chairperson of the 2018 Australian Short Story Festival.
